

Announcing a New Leadership DVD

Collaborative Supervision: Accompanying Teachers on the Professional Development Journey

This amazing new DVD shows a live session that depicts a collaborative model of teacher supervision and coaching.

The underlying premise for this approach is that ongoing professional development requires active supervision. While teachers will be at varying levels of competence, commitment and confidence, all staff members require the sense that their supervisors are interested in what they are doing, what's working well and what isn't.

With this DVD, you can be a fly on the wall as you watch a skillful leader demonstrate methods of inquiry that empower the teacher being supervised to take charge of her own professional development.

Learn methods of collaborative supervision and coaching that enable the teacher to:

-  figure out and articulate her own needs and goals related to current work processes and projects
-  ask for specific types of help from her supervisor

This adult learning model departs from a more typical supervision approach used in the early childhood field. It frees the Supervisor from being the problem-solver who "fixes" every difficult situation thereby setting up an atmosphere of dependence rather than learning.

Collaborative supervision is a respectful approach that recognizes untapped abilities that can flourish with attention, support and the belief that every teacher can achieve greater competence.
